

Triangle ABC is equilateral.

To prove: for any point P in the interior of the triangle, the sum of the lengths of perpendicular segments from P to the three sides equals the height of the triangle. That is, the lengths of the red segments sum to the length of the green segment.